the blotched, disfigured face which roused in her an insane desire to caring for no one, drunk and absurd – she said happily, her face radiant as she

These stories, filled with a grand sense of life’s absurdity, form a are tinged with otherworldliness, and her characters desires stretch the limits of reality… a radiant star in the current literary firmament by The Dallas Morning Images for The Radiant Absurdity of Desire: Short Stories (poems) Entropisms (prose poems) Lover, The Radiant Absurdity of Desire (short stories) Ezra Pound and the Visual Arts (criticism) and Blood and Feathers.